- Between 12 and 15 August 1950 it was learned that the kitchen of the Infanterie Kaserne, Athenow (H 53/2 15), served 350 soldiers, including 170 recruits. [] sent off the troops from the barracks were still at the Altengrafow range. [] the headquarters of an artillery division was in the Infanterie Kaserne because of the many telephone lines converging there and the traffic of passenger cars between the Division Kaserne and the headquarters building of the Infanterie Kaserne. []

[] Officers ranking from major and up were driven in passenger cars [] to the officers' billets in the city of Athenow. [] regulations, which are known to the civilian population, specify that captains and junior officers must be billeted in the barracks installations. []

[] were observed for the first time shuttling between the Infanterie Kaserne and the corps headquarters in the Division Kaserne. []

50X1-HUM
- [] the Pioneer Kaserne was occupied by 470 troops, including 200 recruits, between 12 and 15 August 1950. Turm 85-in: AA guns were in the barracks yard. []

50X1-HUM
- The Kraftfahrer Kaserne housed 250 troops, including 350 recruits, [] On 12 August 1950 Major Yank (Fnu), (phonetic spelling) assumed command of the artillery unit in the installation. It was not known where the former commanding officer, Major Maslov, (Fnu), (phonetic spelling) had gone. []

On 12 August 1950, 300 recruits from all three military installations in Athenow were shipped to Altengrafow (H 53/4 30) on trucks []

[] The trucks had been sent from Altengrafow to Athenow to pick up the recruits. []
